Sustainable Rural Development and Solidarity Economy

Family Farmers are directly engaged in agro-ecological development presiding over the rural territory and making a sustainable use of local natural resources

Organizaciones Económicas Campesinas (Oecas) are the main key players for rural development in Bolivia and a guarantee of future sustainability

BECAUSE

they promote a conservation oriented approach to natural resources and the diffusion of agro-ecology, enhancing thus food sovereignty they promote the economic role of family farmers through their gradual integration in food value chains they promote the participation of family farmers to local governance

ProgettoMondo Foundation carries out in Bolivia a multiannual programme, Vida Campesina, whose aim is to conserve the means of production for future generations through the preservation of natural resources (land, water and air) and biodiversity respecting traditional customs and practices

7.000 bolivian family farmers (35.000 individuals) affiliated to 20 local Oecas producing milk and dairy products, wheat, cereals, fruits and vegetables have been trained

More than 100 officials and local authorities of 19 municipalities have been trained on Rural Community Tourism, Sustainable Land Management, Food Security

800 Oecas executives working in the field of agricultural production, livestock and management of Rural Community Tourism enterprises have been trained

1.185 indigenous families (6.000 individuals) have been trained in alpaca breeding and the processing of vicuña fibre
