ENHANCING THE AGRICULTURAL COOPERATIVES SYSTEM IN EGYPT

Agriculture cooperatives (ACs) in Egypt were established at the beginning of the 20th century as “agricultural cooperative syndicates”. Farmers were brought together to facilitate access to agricultural inputs, improve production and contribute to rural development. However, ACs have faced a series of constraints, as well as knowledge gaps, in all cooperative units, resulting in a decline in their reputation and performance. In this context, the Government of Egypt (GoE) amended the law governing ACs (Law 204/2014) which, for the first time, allowed ACs to create shareholding companies and carry out profit-seeking projects. Following the approval of this law, the GoE requested assistance from FAO to help cooperatives take advantage of the opportunities offered by the new enabling environment, capitalize on the exchange of experiences and identify best practices from successful professional organizations in other countries.

WHAT DID THE PROJECT DO?

The main features of agricultural cooperatives in Egypt were characterized through a mapping study; and profiling of the cooperatives was undertaken to assess their performance levels. An action plan was developed to support reforms and the implementation of laws to activate the work of cooperatives; and a future national programme was formulated to ensure that the desired reforms would be implemented as per the suggested plan of action. To ensure the sustainability of the project activities, training of trainers programmes were organized for staff members from the Central Administration of Agricultural Cooperatives (CAAC) of the Ministry of Agriculture and Land Reclamation; the capacities of agricultural cooperative members and CAAC staff were strengthened through a capacity-building programme; a pilot activity was implemented to guide four cooperatives to explore the feasibility and potential of the amendments of Law 204/2014; and an electronic/virtual network was established for a National Dialogue Platform. In addition, two study tours to France and Kenya were organized in order to expose participants to successful cooperative experiences.

IMPACT

The project contributed to making agricultural cooperatives in Egypt efficient, equitable and inclusive enterprises contributing to rural poverty alleviation for the benefit of small-scale farmers. For example, as a result of the knowledge and experience gained during the project workshops and study tours, one of the beneficiaries was reported to have created a new marketing cooperative using the opportunity provided by the new law on cooperatives, while another beneficiary developed her cooperative’s capacity in packaging and marketing dates to raise producers’ revenues.
