

Office of Communications – November 2020

Increasing stakeholder participation in forest law reform processes: case studies from the FAO-EU FLEGT Programme

Corrigendum

Updated on 21 February 2021

The following corrections were made to the PDF after it went to print.

Page	Location	Text in printed PDF	Text in corrected PDF
6-9	Whole page		Pages moved to end matter of document
6	Title	Key findings	Key findings per country
13	Last paragraph	In the Congo, private sector representatives mentioned that draft texts arrived too late, so they did not have sufficient time to review and understand the proposed revisions before the plenary sessions. Provide effective and consistent leadership and facilitation of stakeholder processes.	In the Congo, private sector representatives mentioned that draft texts arrived too late, so they did not have sufficient time to review and understand the proposed revisions before the plenary sessions. Provide effective and consistent leadership and facilitation of stakeholder processes. [split paragraph and changed formatting]
14	Column 1 Second line	In the Republic of the Philippines, the quasi-academic status of the FDC	In the Philippines, the quasi-academic status of the FDC
14	Column 1 paragraph 2	In the Republic of the Philippines, although broad stakeholder engagement was pursued	In the Philippines, although broad stakeholder engagement was pursued
14	Column 1 paragraph 2	which some stakeholders felt was too fast for them to provide a meaningful contribution.	which some stakeholders felt was too fast for them to provide a meaningful contribution.
15	3 rd and 4 th line of second column	In the Republic of the Philippines,	In the Philippines,
16	Column 1 paragraph 2	In the Republic of the Philippines,	In the Philippines,
18	Footnote		Removed
18	Column 2 paragraph 2	Ensuring that sectors with opposing interests receive a fair chance to express their needs and views is key. Even within the same sector, a one-size-fits-all approach needs to be carefully considered and is usually best avoided. Within the private sector for instance, both large and small companies with distinct interests can make decisive contributions.	Ensuring that sectors with opposing interests receive a fair chance to express their needs and views is key. Within the private sector for instance, both large and small companies with distinct interests can make decisive contributions.
19	Column 1 line 1	able to attend or comfortable speaking in such fora.	able to attend or feel comfortable speaking in such fora.

Contact: publishing-submissions@fao.org