FAO/OIE Global Strategy for the Prevention and Control of Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza

16 - 19 April 2007, FAO Rome

AGENDA

The overall objective of this inter-agency consultative workshop is to develop and build consensus among all key partners on a jointly-owned, mid/longer-term, Strategic Communication Framework and Action Plan addressing the animal health component of Highly Pathogenic Avian Influenza in poultry, and prevention of the emergence of a pandemic.

The specific objectives and expected outcomes are as follows:

1. Identification, analysis and elaboration of strategic communication issues, constraints, information gaps, best practices and risk communication strategies applicable to different audiences in countries with various epidemiological settings, related to animal health and prevention/control of HPAI virus transmission.
2. Characterization and differentiation of the potential role of communication in prevention, preparedness, response and recovery phases of HPAI in terms of both animal health protection and public health protection.
3. Prioritisation and agreement on strategic communication interventions, timelines/milestones, and coordination mechanisms for implementation, management and monitoring of communication activities. Emphasis to be placed on a global animal health communication strategy that is implementable from the highest decision-making levels to the field.
4. Developing consensus on a Strategic Communication Framework and Action Plan, including partner roles/contributions and potential public-private partnership opportunities to advance effective HPAI communications
