

Manuals on animal health

The FAO EMPRES programme has produced a series of manuals related to animal health with the intention to enhance early recognition of major transboundary animal diseases of livestock and outline appropriate measures to be implemented for emergency preparedness, disease prevention and outbreak control.

The manuals are designed as technical and best practices guides to be used by veterinarians in the field facing a transboundary animal disease outbreak, and to assist decision makers in formulating emergency preparedness and contingency plans as well as implementing prevention or control measures.

To have more information about the manuals or receive a hardcopy please contact: empres-livestock@fao.org