

Children are most prone to the effects of hunger. Undernutrition and malnutrition in children affect not only physical but also mental development. They also weaken children's immune system, making them highly vulnerable to infection and can worsen the level of malnutrition. These effects are further compounded by environmental factors such as unsafe water and sanitary conditions.

Regional distribution of children suffering from insufficient growth (1990)

In percentage

