Management

Participatory integrated watershed management in upland areas (TCP/TAJ/2903)

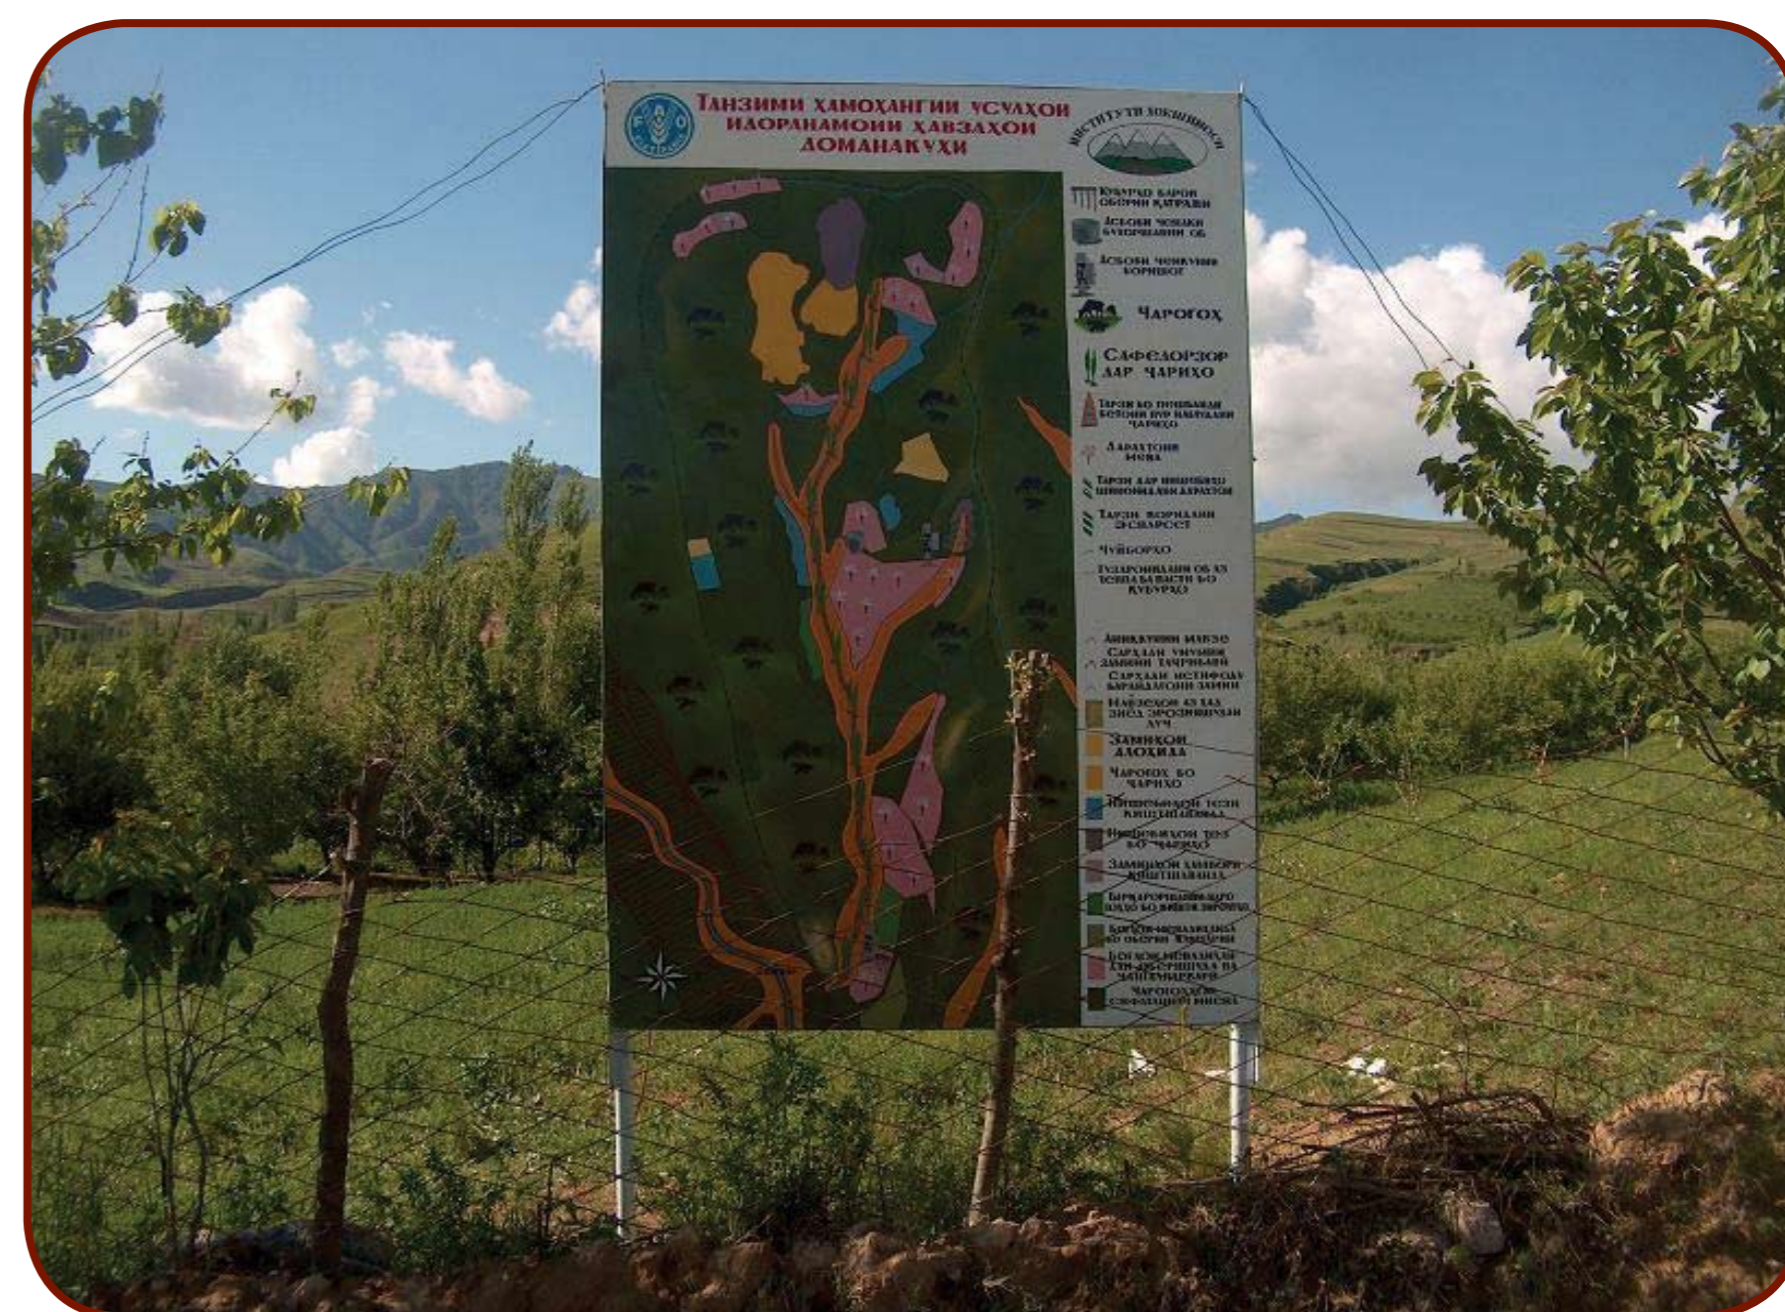

Scope

Rehabilitating and developing the country's upland resource mainly through:

- participatory integrated watershed management activities;
- implementation of income generating activities;
- transfer of technical knowledge;
- preparation of project profiles for further interventions.

Approach

- Selection of a watershed as a training and demonstration site.
- Initiation of several pilot interventions.
- Establishment of thematic interest groups.
- Close collaboration of government agencies at the central, district and community levels.

Weaving knowledge into development

- Risen awareness about watershed degradation issues among staff and technicians.
- Training sessions and study tours to India and Nepal.
- Technical knowledge and skills, applied in the pilot site, expand beyond the project context.
