Food production has kept ahead of population growth globally, but not in all countries. Many countries have little capacity to sustain growing food import bills (see map on food import dependency).