COMMITTEE ON CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL MATTERS

Eighty-fourth Session

Rome, 2 – 4 February 2009

STATUS AND COMPOSITION OF THE PROGRAMME COMMITTEE, FINANCE COMMITTEE AND COMMITTEE ON CONSTITUTIONAL AND LEGAL MATTERS

BACKGROUND

1. When dealing with the implementation of the actions set out in the Immediate Plan of Action (IPA) regarding the Programme and Finance Committees, one should distinguish matters related to the functions and role of the Committees and matters related to their status and composition. This is so because, while it is possible to address immediately matters related to the status and composition of these Committees, matters related to the functions of the Committees cannot be seen in isolation from the new planning and programme of work and budget processes, which are still being formulated. It is proposed to review matters related to the functions of the Committees subsequently when addressing these new processes¹. Therefore, this document deals only with the former set of actions. These are described as follows in the IPA approved by the Conference at its Thirty-fifth (special) Session:

“Programme and Finance Committees membership, chairs and observers: Changes will be introduced in the Basic Texts, including for the election of members. The members will be countries not individuals but in nominating their representatives countries will be expected to propose representatives with the necessary technical qualifications, and (IPA action 2.44):

(i) chairs will be elected by the Council on the basis of their individual qualifications and will not occupy seats of their electoral groups or represent a region or country (in the event of a chair falling vacant, the incumbent will be replaced by a vice-chair of the Committee elected by the Committee, until such time as a replacement can be elected by the Council) (IPA action 2.45);

(ii) the membership of the Committees will each be increased, in addition to the Chair, to twelve representatives with each region having a right to up to two representatives each for Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Near East and Europe and one representative each for North America and the South West Pacific nominated by the region and confirmed by the Council (countries may substitute their members for individual meetings or during the term of office, thus avoiding that a seat remains empty) (IPA action 2.46);

(iii) Committees, including joint meetings will be open to non-speaking observers (IPA action 2.47).

Committee on Constitutional and Legal Matters

Changes will be introduced in the Basic Texts, including for the election of members. The members will be countries not individuals but in nominating their representatives countries will be expected to propose representatives with the necessary legal qualifications (IPA action 2.48);

The chair will be elected from amongst the CCLM members by the Council on the basis of his/her individual merit (in the event of a chair falling vacant, the incumbent will be replaced by a vice-chair of the Committee elected by the Committee, until such time as a replacement can be elected by the Council) (IPA action 2.49);

The Committee will have seven members, with each region having a right to one member nominated by the region and confirmed by the Council (countries may substitute their members for individual meetings or during the term of office, thus avoiding that a seat remains empty) (IPA action 2.50).

*The CCLM will be open to non-speaking observers (IPA action 2.51)”.

ISSUES FOR CONSIDERATION

2. This document proposes amendments to the General Rules of the Organization (GRO) for the implementation of the above actions. Consolidated revised texts of Rule XXVI (Programme Committee); Rule XXVII (Finance Committee) and Rule XXXIV (Committee on Constitutional and Legal Matters) are presented below. In reviewing the proposed amendments to the GRO, the CCLM may wish to keep in mind the following considerations.

Programme and Finance Committees

3. The IPA calls for a number of actions in respect of the Programme and Finance Committees. It, in particular, stated that “the members will be countries not individuals but in nominating their representatives countries will be expected to propose representatives with the necessary technical qualifications”. This action does not seem to call for any amendments to the GRO because this is the situation that has prevailed since 1977 as regards the Programme and the Finance Committees, as reflected in current Rule XXVI, paragraph 1 concerning the Programme Committee and current Rule XXVII, paragraph 1, concerning the Finance Committee. Indeed, the Committees were established with their present “general format” in 1957. At that time, the Committees “consisted of individuals selected by the Council in a personal capacity from among individuals [‘who have shown a deep interest in the objectives of the Organization and who have participated in Conference and Council sessions and in other activities of the Organization (in the case of the Programme Committee)’] and [‘in the government service of Member Nations, for their special competence in finance and administration (in the case of the Finance Committee)’]”.

4. Occasional debates took place after 1957 regarding the status of the members of the Committees, especially in connection with situations where individuals were prevented from continuing to exercise their functions and there was a need to replace them. In 1977 the Conference introduced current Rules XXVI, paragraph 1 and XXVII, paragraph 1 of the GRO². Since then it is clear that membership of the Committees is an office vested in Member Nations of the Organization, but exercised by specific qualified individuals. This is a situation which is not unknown in similar bodies throughout the United Nations system. Subject to such views as the CCLM may hold, or such clarifications as may be provided by Conference Committee upon request of the CCLM, implementation of the IPA in this regard does not seem to require a revision of the current Rules, but rather a more rigorous implementation of such Rules.

5. On the issue of the qualifications of the individuals that elected Member Nations may appoint, it is proposed that the current text of Rules XXVI, paragraph 1 and XXVII, paragraph 1 be maintained. The designation of representatives remains a prerogative of Members, made after appropriate regional consultation. In addition, as evidenced by practice, too strict conditions regarding the qualifications of representatives might not substantially change the nature of the current process of their designation by Members and, moreover, might limit the ability of Members to designate representatives³.

6. The various actions of the IPA seem to be covered under revised Rules XXVI and XXVII of the GRO. The Chairperson, who would not be nominated in respect of a region, would be elected by the Council. This would presumably involve regional consultation. While this was not articulated in detail in the IPA, the actions seem to imply that the Chairpersons should no longer be, strictly speaking, Members of the Committees. They would always be expected to act supra partes and would not represent the views of the regions to which they belong. Occasional situations where Chairpersons have, in addition to exercising their functions, presented the views of their constituencies, would not be justified any longer. The status of the Chairpersons would replicate, in respect of the Committees, the status of the Independent Chairperson of the Council. This would have a number of implications with particular reference to the fact that the Chairpersons would not vote, which would need to be reflected in revised Rules of Procedure of the Committees.

³ The IPA refers to the fact that the Finance Committee should deal with administrative matters. As it appears from its mandate, as defined in the GRO, the Finance Committee does deal with a very wide range of administrative issues, including personnel matters. A question that may arise in future is whether this should be reflected in the name of the Committee.

7. The IPA also foresees that elections of the members of the Committees will be done in respect of regions. The Council would elect either two members or one member from each region, as determined by the Conference for the purpose of Council elections. A proposal that the Council should elect members of the Programme and Finance Committees in respect of specific regions (i.e. that seats be allocated to regions) has been discussed from 1985 until 1989 and there has been no consensus on the matter, presumably because it involved also a change in the number of seats by region, a matter upon which agreement has been reached now⁴. The proposals for election made here draw upon work carried out at that time.

8. The IPA refers to members being nominated by the concerned “region” and “confirmed” by the Council. It is assumed that this is a generic form of wording. From a legal point of view, as reflected in the revised Rules, nominations would continue to be made as up to now, following regional consultation, and election done by the Council. In normal circumstances, regional consultations should allow for the number of nominated candidates not to exceed the number of available seats, and the election could be done by clear general consent under Rule XII, paragraph 10(a) of the GRO. However, as was at times the case in the past, situations could arise where the number of nominated candidates is higher than the number of available seats and there would be a need to conduct the election through voting.

9. The time limits for the presentation of nominations set out in Rules XXVI, paragraph 2 and XXVII, paragraph 2, of the GRO of ten days before the opening of the session at which the election is to be held has been maintained. So far this election has taken place at the session of the Council held immediately after the session of the Conference. In the past, when the Conference used to meet for some three weeks, this time limit occurred during the Conference session. Because of the reduction in the duration of the session of the Conference, this time limit falls now before the beginning of the session of the Conference. It is assumed that the election would continue to take place at a short session of the Council held immediately after the session of the Conference.

⁴ However, there was eventually no consensus as to this course of action although the matter was discussed again between 2001 and 2003.

10. In this connection, while it is foreseen that the Council will meet more frequently and hold a session after the session of the Conference, it is unclear whether in future the Council will continue to hold a short session immediately after the session of the Conference during which elections will take place. It is proposed to clarify, in Rules XXVI, paragraph 2, and XXVII paragraph 2 of the GRO, that although members of the Committees are elected for a period of two years at the session following the regular session of the Conference, their term of office expires upon election by the Council of new Members. This solution would help to ensure continuity in their office, also in consideration of the fact that the Committees are expected to meet more frequently than in the past.

11. The rules regarding the convening of meetings of the Committees have been changed. These rules have been drafted on the basis of current provisions regarding the Finance Committee, with some adjustments.

Committee on Constitutional and Legal Matters

12. In general, the actions set out in the IPA regarding the Programme and Finance Committees build and elaborate upon current rules regarding these Committees and, as such, they do not change the general nature and modus operandi of these bodies. The actions regarding the CCLM bring its status in line with that of the Programme and Finance Committees. Under current Rule XXXIV of the GRO, the CCLM is a Government committee and Member Nations are not required to appoint individuals possessing special qualifications. The IPA calls upon Members to designate representatives with the necessary legal qualifications. The observations made in connection with the qualifications of the representatives of Member Nations to the Programme and Finance Committees apply to the CCLM⁵. Revised Rule XXXIV of the GRO contained in this document reflects the amendments proposed.

13. In the course of the discussions regarding the CCLM within Working Group II of the Conference Committee, the proposal was made that the Council should elect the Chairperson of the CCLM and seven other Members. This would have increased the number of CCLM Members to eight, all elected by the Council along the same lines as the election of the Members of the Programme and Finance Committees. Eventually it was felt preferable to maintain the current number of seven Members in order to facilitate the decision making process. However, as the CCLM works by consensus, the number of Members appears to be a secondary issue. For the sake of consistency between the proposals regarding the CCLM and those regarding the Programme and Finance Committees – where the Council will elect an “Independent Chairperson” and subsequently members from regions – the Council could also elect the Chairperson of the CCLM, who would act ad personam, as the Chairperson of any other body, and would neither represent his country, nor his region. The Chairperson would not vote.⁶

⁵ Until 1993/1995, the representatives of Members of the CCLM used to be, for the most part, lawyers. It was not uncommon for some of those representatives to come from the capital. Since about 1995 the number of lawyers has diminished.

⁶ The Chairperson would not represent his/her region. This would have advantages in respect of past situations where Chairpersons of the CCLM considered that in addition to exercising functions as Chairperson they should also present

Therefore the same approach to the status of the Chairperson would be followed in respect of all the Committees.

14. Finally, in all cases, provision is made for the Committees to be open to silent observers. The proposed rules clearly indicate that the sessions of the committees “shall be open to silent observers who shall not take part in any debates”, to avoid attempts by silent observers to intervene in deliberations. They would also allow the Committees to decide otherwise as there are matters that may need to be discussed outside the presence of observers.

SUGGESTED ACTION BY THE COMMITTEE

18. The Committee is invited to review this document, including revised Rules XXVI, XXVII and XXXIV of the GRO and make such observations, including such amendments thereto, as it deems appropriate.
19. Although all actions contained in the IPA regarding the matters covered by this document appear to be clear, the Committee is invited to identify any relevant issues on which guidance of the Conference Committee should be sought.
20. The Committee is also invited to note that the implementation of the above actions and the adoption of the revised Rules will also imply changes to the Rules of Procedure of the Programme and the Finance Committees, which will be adopted by the Committees themselves⁷.

⁷ The CCLM has not adopted Rules of Procedure and its proceedings are governed by the General Rules of the Organization.
